GEA TRAINING PROCESS

Traditional training programmes are often delivered over a short period with limited extra activity. This results in poor retention and a failure to embed the learning in organisational culture.

This, in turn, leads to poor return on investment.

The GEA approach starts with providing the learners with access to pre session materials that helps to induct the participant into the learning process.

Each delegate will get access to our system through which they will have some material and pre session activity to help them prepare for the workshop.

During the training the participants are exposed to a variety of subjects and topics that will prepare them for the corporate leadership. Showcasing a variety of opinions and viewpoints from a global community of experts.

Later in the day they participate in an interactive one-hour session where the participants will build upon the knowledge already acquired and dive deeper into the subject of changing the imbalance of women on corporate boards.

The next day they will attend the WIM Top 50 conference, award ceremony and the dinner. This will give them opportunity to interact with globally successful women, exchange views and network.

Participants will also be able to discuss various training related topics with GEA and share their views on real time application of the key takeaways.
